Chairman's Report

It has been quite busy in Wimbledon Park since the last newsletter.

The main focus was, of course, on the Tennis Championship and the Queue - the dratted queue! As we have mentioned in various messages in recent months, the improvements we were hoping for in the management of the Queue this year did not entirely work out as hoped for. The number of toilets was again totally inadequate for the huge numbers (up to 13,000) that turned up in the early part of the first week. Championship visitor numbers, overall, were up to a record 550,000.

Indications last year were that an increasing number of people were turning up to camp, more for the enjoyment of the event itself rather than interest in tennis. This was certainly the case this year. This is being driven by general publicity for the Championship and the Queue but also through social media and amateur so-called influencers. It is clear that the Queue is fast becoming a social event in itself which means that, although the AELTC are working on the basis of offering 10,000 tickets a day being sold (confirmed by them), the numbers overall are growing well beyond that together with all knock-on effects that go with it.

The arrangement this year was for the AELTC to take over responsibility at 8am on the Sunday morning of the 28th June. However, on Saturday 27th, while the park was still under the supervision and responsibility of the LBM, it is estimated that over 1,000 campers had turned up by the end of the day and there were precious little facilities ready for them with the usual unhygienic consequences. Management of the Home Park Road and Revelstoke gates at closing time, in particular, was a mess as a result of confused official information. This is a problem every year and a constant irritation for local residents.

The AELTC have shown themselves to be extremely adept at running a successful tennis tournament within their own grounds. However, managing the demands of the Queue – of between 10,000 and 13,000 people (at the moment) is something that they have yet to manage with the same enthusiasm and efficiency.

Also, there is an increasing amount of local opinion which feels that, given the huge space available to the AELTC on the Golf Course, that they should host the queue on their own grounds and free up our park for local use thus avoiding the unwelcome environmental and hygiene problems caused by the ever-increasing numbers.

The Community Panel of local stakeholders set up last year with the AELTC to discuss improvements in the management of the Queue is going to be busy this year sorting out the problems. We can only hope that the AELTC are in better listening mode and next year do the right thing and happily indulge in overestimating rather than underestimating the requirements. Clearly, it is not lack of money that is holding them back.

Also, anecdotally, I note that a growing number of tennis fans are increasingly finding the congestion in the AELTC grounds, in the first week, very uncomfortable and increasingly a reason not to go. Clearly, management must do something about that.

Interestingly, this is something that has been pointed out to them by the alternative plans put forward by the architects Richard Rees and Ken MacFarlane at recent Save Wimbledon Park meetings in Southfields and Wimbledon. However, it appears that the AELTC say they are not interested in discussing any different plans unless they include a large stadium on the Golf Course.

Talking of 'listening mode' it was interesting to see the sizeable demonstration (see page 17) on the first official morning of the Queue (June 29th). A colourful array of good-humoured demonstrators were up very early and asking the AELTC to do a better job of 'listening' to the opinions of the local community who have been trying to persuade them to take a serious interest in the alternative plans.

As many of you know from attending recent SWP meetings locally, these plans have been greeted enthusiastically by those attending. It is difficult to understand why the AELTC does not wish to engage in serious discussion with the community over plans that could avoid the continuing legal challenges that have delayed their plans so far.

SWP have managed to obtain permission to appeal both the Judicial Review decision in October last year and the Statutory Trust decision earlier this year in March.

I understand that recently the AELTC resisted further overtures and made it clear that any plan needed to have the new 8,000-seater Stadium on the golf course. This is despite the fact they have openly acknowledged that this would be in direct conflict with the Covenants they signed up to willingly when they bought the freehold in 1993.

It appears that recently SWP requested a meeting with the Leader of the Council to discuss the alternative plans. This was refused apparently because they said AELTC were not interested. Surely our Council should be interested in any plan that would avoid future conflict and delay.

The Council has, in the past, been challenged three times by the Lib Dems at full Council meetings to agree to 'enforce' the Covenants. Each time they have declined but said they will 'respect' the Covenants. The problem is that nobody seems to know what they mean by this.

Sadly we have to report on page 14, the recent passing of Nigel Israel, a long time resident and committee member and Treasurer of this Association. He will be sadly missed by all his friends in Wimbledon Park.

On Page 8 there is a summary of a paper written by Dr Dave Dawson on the fish deaths that occurred in Wimbledon Park Lake during Wimbledon Fortnight. This is not the first time this type of event has occurred and we will be following the progress of the ongoing investigation.

A message from our MP Paul Kohler

Our Seventh Prime Minister in Ten Years

The appointment of Andy Burnham as Prime Minister has prompted many residents to ask what this latest change means for the country and for communities such as Wimbledon.

The United Kingdom now finds itself with its seventh Prime Minister in just ten years. While that understandably causes concern, it is worth remembering that mid-Parliament changes of leadership are not unusual in British politics. Since 1945, the UK has had nineteen Prime Ministers, twelve of whom entered office between General Elections. In that sense, Mr Burnham's arrival in Downing Street is more consistent with recent political history than many people realise.

What is more unusual is how little we know about the programme on which he intends to govern. Unlike previous leadership transitions, there was no lengthy leadership contest and therefore little opportunity for the public to hear competing visions for the country's future. While few people would welcome weeks of political infighting, there is value in public debate and scrutiny before a new Prime Minister takes office.

The challenge facing the new Government is a familiar one. Britain faces a series of long-term economic and social pressures that successive governments have struggled to address. Regardless of political party, difficult decisions have too often been postponed rather than confronted.

Andy Burnham's popularity is currently high, and it is understandable that many people will welcome a change of tone and style from his predecessor. However, popularity and good intentions alone are not enough. Ultimately, every government must balance public expectations with economic reality, and difficult choices cannot be avoided indefinitely.

That does not mean there are no grounds for optimism. The new Prime Minister has spoken positively about rebuilding relationships with Europe, strengthening local decision-making and exploring constitutional reform. These are areas where there may be opportunities to build broader political consensus.

However, there are also issues that will be of particular concern to residents in Wimbledon and across South West London.

One such issue is the growing tendency to view London and the South East primarily through the lens of property values. Because house prices are high in areas such as Wimbledon, there can be an assumption that local residents are uniformly affluent and therefore able to absorb additional taxation with little difficulty.

The reality is often very different. Many long-standing residents are asset-rich but income-poor. They may have purchased their homes decades ago and seen property values rise because of wider market conditions rather than any increase in their disposable income. Policies such as a mansion tax can sound attractive in principle, but they risk creating significant burdens for people whose wealth exists largely on paper rather than in readily available income.

High house prices themselves are often portrayed as evidence of prosperity, yet the picture is far more complex. While rising property values may benefit some homeowners, they also create significant challenges. They make it harder for young people to purchase their first home, increase rental costs, place greater pressure on household finances and make it more difficult for families to remain in the communities where they have established roots.

A home should first and foremost be somewhere to live, not simply a financial asset. The success of a community should be measured not by how expensive its housing becomes, but by whether people of different ages and incomes can continue to live and thrive within it.

For that reason, the long-term solution lies not in treating homeowners as a convenient source of additional taxation, nor in celebrating ever-rising property values, but in increasing housing supply, improving affordability and ensuring that future generations have the same opportunities to establish themselves in communities such as Wimbledon.

Some commentators argue that Britain has become ungovernable. I do not share that view. Our challenges are significant, but they are not insurmountable. What is required is honesty about the choices we face and the willingness to make decisions that may be difficult in the short term but beneficial in the long term.

As Andy Burnham begins his premiership, I wish him every success. The country benefits when any government succeeds. The real test, however, will not be his popularity today but whether he is prepared to confront the long-term challenges that successive governments have too often chosen to defer.

Fish mortality, Wimbledon Park Lake, July 2026

Dr D.G. Dawson DPhil (Oxon), 17th August 2026

Summary

The nature and cause of a mass mortality of fish on 8th July 2026 is described. Some 100 mature Carp, a few European Eels and a few other bottom-feeding fish were killed. There have been other mass mortality incidents there in the last 25 years, in which various fish species were involved and all of these have occurred close to the discharge points of the lake tributaries. In contrast, this event was lake-wide, and so was not caused by a short-lived discharge from a tributary. None of the previous mass-mortalities corresponded to high temperatures, but the water temperature this time peaked at 30°C, or above. A shortage of oxygen (hypoxia) was suggested by the behaviour of the fish and by similar incidents elsewhere in the country, and confirmed by testing the water. Previous monitoring showed plenty of oxygen in the lake water, so hypoxia is rare here. The owner of the lake, LB Merton proposed to prevent recurrence by controlling Blue-green algae (cyanobacteria), which were abundant at the time. But these were equally abundant earlier in the summer and in previous summers, as were heat waves. In contrast to previous heat waves, this mass mortality corresponded to record low wind speeds, so I conclude that three factors came together to kill the fish: abundant cyanobacteria, high temperatures and lack of wind. I checked for other possible correlates with the die-off and found none. This work was impeded by the absence of published information on the lake, something that LB Merton could remedy readily. The ultimate cause of cyanobacterial abundance was eutrophication of the lake by phosphate, but the main source of this remains unknown. Candidates were: waterfowl defecation, die off of plankton, excess feeding of birds and fish, arrival down the tributaries, atmospheric deposition, and disturbance of sediment on the bottom of the lake. A special study is needed to identify the principal factors. The best way to avoid a recurrence of mass mortality would be to reduce phosphate pollution, starting with the easy ways to do this and moving on to the less tractable sources. Meanwhile, LB Merton have trialled aerators and ultrasonic devices, methods without a convincing track record in lakes as large and shallow as ours. Given that oxygen comes back naturally, and cyanobacterial blooms die off naturally, there is a real risk that the devices will be confirmed as the cause of a recovery that was, in fact, a natural occurrence. It is vital that LB Merton should publish the minutes of meetings, studies and advice they have had, so that these, and future, events can be better understood.

Friends of Wimbledon Park News August 2026

England is one of the most nature-depleted countries globally. According to the State of Nature assessments, English wildlife continues to decline. Approximately 13% of its species are threatened with extinction, and only a tiny fraction of protected land is actively managed to support a healthy ecosystem. Since 2016 we have initiated tasks that includes planting over 3,000 trees, fencing in the veteran tree, negotiating the deculverting of Wimbledon Park Brook and planting the Central Railway Hedge. The changing climate is challenging and suggests our weather seasons are changing. We'll need to consider carefully future tree and flower planting to accommodate these weather seasons

For the last two years with assistance from LBM and idverde we have created meadows which are mowed in spring and October this allows plants to grow and insects and other species to flourish. It has been a slow process, but now into its 3rd year grass is growing tall, new flowers can be seen and moths, bees, butterflies and other species are increasing.

The black poplars along the perimeter path are nearing end of life, and the hornbeams were planted in 2019 as a long-term replacement. So, we call this area the hornbeam meadow and in this 3rd year the grass and other species are flowering.

We have several other meadows forming by the perimeter path and there is the Glade in Horse Close Wood as you enter from the eastern path.

Two donated Catalpas (Catalpa bignonioides) are in the fenced-in sections in the Great Field. It is a spreading, medium-sized deciduous tree, with pale green, broad-ovate leaves to 25cm in length. Flowers 3-4cm in width, white, marked with orange and purple, in conical panicles. Fruit a slender bean-like pod.

It is a pollinator and will need protection for several years and our grandchildren will enjoy it. Meanwhile, we need to look after them.

The restoration of the Waterfall area was delayed due to dam related technical difficulties. However, recent news shows progress.

We plan to make further progress on Revelstoke Road entrance improvements which will require fund-raising and we will release updates once we get quotes for the work. Hopefully, we may get some funding from AELTC Left Luggage proceeds which are donated for improving facilities in Wimbledon Park.

The Wimbledon Championships Community Panel (WCCP) have provided a note on Wimbledon Fortnight and points out that the sheer size of this year's queue was a problem. We have carried out an online survey, and our report will be circulated later this month.

The fish kill during Wimbledon fortnight included over 10 eels, an endangered species which is worrying. We are collecting the facts and will engage with LBM to ensure the lake is properly managed with regular updates.

Councillors' Report

AELTC and the tournament

We have written to Merton and AELTC regarding the numerous failures of both organisations to manage the queue in Wimbledon Park. We are also asking that a clean up of our pavements is done soon after the tournament as the number of visitors (around 10 – 12,000 per day creates a lot of mess and ground-in dirt. Other issues include food deliveries to people in the queue, opening times for the gates, too few toilets for peak demand, use of sailing club and playground toilets, inadequate stewarding, emergency numbers not working properly.

Hire Bikes

Cllr Tony Reiss has been discussing the issue of Hire E-Bikes and their parking arrangements with the relevant cabinet member. We have suggested planters at each end of the stand outside WP station to better define and contain the bikes. Discussions are also taking place with Lime and Forest about reducing speeds allowed in our parks.

Durnsford Rec

We are looking into the idea of installing some padel courts in Durnsford Rec. Please let us know your views about this. Would you like to see padel courts here? Would you be likely to use them?

A new playground is coming to Durnsford Rec later this year. We were pleased to have given our input at the design stage. We hope children like the results.

Wimbledon Park

We have asked for the splashpad in Wimbledon Park to be kept open longer in Wimbledon Park especially for younger children, once school-age children go back to school. However, to no avail. The splashpad will close on 6th September.

Cllr Reiss has persuaded Merton Council to adopt a trial of 'no glyphosate' in Wimbledon Park. We understand this would be a first in the borough.

Friends of Wimbledon Park organise a number of tours and walks throughout the year to help people appreciate wildlife and nature in their local area. For more information, visit their website:

Friendsofwimbledonpark.org.uk

Leopold Road

After the success of the street party while roadworks were underway, Cllr Nick Thomas is discussing with Leopold Road businesses and residents the possibility of closing (the lower) part of the road for Car Free Day in September and for one Saturday in the run up to Christmas. We will report back on their decision.

It is with great sadness that we note the recent passing of Nigel Israel.

A resident of Wimbledon Park for over 40 years, he was well known, liked and respected by many friends and neighbours.

Nigel was a valued and long-time committee member and past Treasurer of the Wimbledon Park Residents' Association and also a Trustee of the Wimbledon Park Community Trust.

An extremely sociable individual, Nigel had wide ranging interests and was a member of many Livery Companies and other organisations in the City of London to which he contributed a great deal of time and energy over a long number of years.

In particular, he was a keen Member of the Worshipful Company of Pewterers, founder member The Society of Jewellery Historians and past Chairman and Trustee of the Gemmological Association (of Great Britain). Being a qualified gemmologist he had a great interest in and knowledge about gemstones and was well known for being extremely knowledgeable about, and often asked to give opinion on, diamond collections.

Widely knowledgeable and with a formidable memory he enjoyed the company of a wide range of friends and fellow livery and club members. He had a great interest in good food and was a very able cook.

He had an incredible memory for facts of all kinds, particularly history. He also had a good store of silly jokes which never failed to amuse and was often accompanied at coffee by some of his collection of bears.

He will be greatly missed by all his friends in Wimbledon Park. He was truly a remarkable person who contributed much to our lives.

We offer our sincere condolences to his wife Judy.

Richard and Christine Jones will shortly come to the end of 27 years running their bookshop TENNIS GALLERY WIMBLEDON. Richard looks back at a wonderful period here in Wimbledon Park.

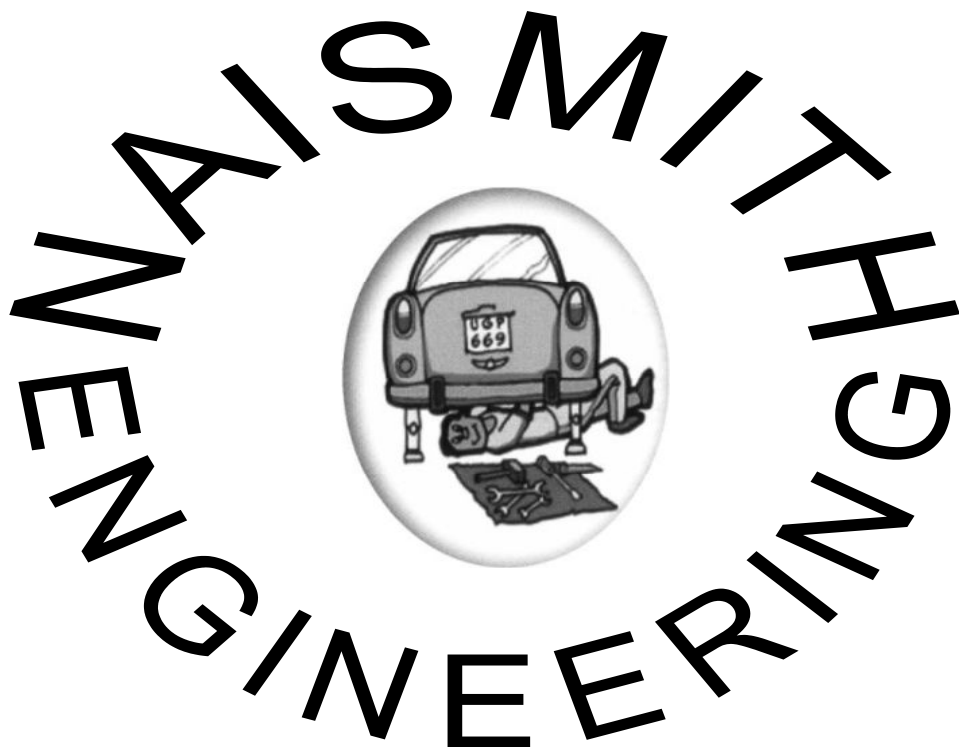

After more than a quarter of a century in Wimbledon Park I'm pleased to say that Christine and I will be handing over Tennis Gallery Wimbledon to our good friend Mark Laurence on 31st October 2026. The business is set to continue from his premises at 81 High Street, Wimbledon Village, and we know that our many friends in the local community will be as supportive to Mark in his exciting new venture as you have always been to us.

I had been looking around for a shop to let in Wimbledon Park for a year or two in the late 1990s, and for a while thought I had found it. Acanthus Antiques at 171 Arthur Road on the corner with Farquhar Road was owned by an elderly gentleman who planned to move away when his daughter finished her education, and he was very happy for us to take over the lease. I kept in touch with him but was dismayed when one day I discovered the shop had closed suddenly and a new tenant had moved in!

However, it was not long before we found a shop available in an even more favourable location close to the station. It had previously been a bespoke jewellers called Eternal Jewels run by two young chaps, Lee and Louis. On one of my regular Saturday afternoon visits to check out property I enquired in their shop and to my surprise I learned that they had just decided to move their business to Wimbledon Village. It would suit them very nicely to have a new prospective tenant to recommend to their landlords.

We took over the lease in May 1999, and for the first few months my spare-time hours were spent working with my good friend Geoff Markson converting the premises into a bookshop. Wimbledon Park was a lot quieter then, and I used to park my VW camper in the middle of the road outside the shop! We opened at 114 Arthur Road on 1st October 1999.

We had just had a very successful pop-up shop at a Davis Cup tie in Birmingham, and the prospects seemed bright. After all, it was a tennis bookshop in Wimbledon, right? And in the early years, things went very well indeed. We had a strong mail-order business, and this was now supplemented by shop sales. Wimbledon Official Annuals sold 300 copies each year, and the ATP and WTA Tour Guides, of which we were the sole UK stockist, even more.

As internet bookselling competition increased, we diversified into art, posters, prints, postcards and greeting cards, always with a strong Wimbledon flavour, and the business continued to thrive. In 2007, we moved into larger premises next door at 112 Arthur Road, where we remain to the present day.

Over the years, we have welcomed many distinguished visitors including Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall, Christine Truman, Fred Stolle, Owen Davidson, Jan Kodes, John Barrett, Angela Mortimer, Paul McNamee and All England Club Chairman Ian Hewitt.

Many of these have come to promote their books, and book-signings have been some of the most successful events here at the gallery.

Eminent tennis writers and historians have visited many times and are now our friends, including Chris Bowers, Richard Hillway, Jean-Pierre Picquot and Richard Evans. Richard was inducted into the International Tennis Hall of Fame in 2024.

The nicest thing about being in Wimbledon Park, though, is that it is such a friendly neighbourhood. There are quite a few people who we see regularly to share a smile and a friendly word or two with. A runner regularly runs past our shop and turns into Home Park Road. He has been doing this for over twenty years. I have never spoken to him, and I don't know his name, but for me he sums up the positive spirit of Wimbledon Park.

By the time you read this we will still have a few weeks left before the business transfers up to the village at the end of October. Please pop in and say hello and sign our visitors' book. We know many local people by sight but not by name, so it will be wonderful to have a lasting memento of this marvellous community

Wimbledon Park Community Trust

'Working for Wimbledon Park'

The main income of the Trust is derived from renting Wimbledon Park Hall and Café.

Since its formation, the Charity has made nearly £80,000 in grants to local charities and organisations.

Grants

We would like to encourage local residents to contact us if they feel they can identify a person, organisation or project that would benefit from our support. It can either be a project that would benefit the local area or an organisation that is involved in work that would be of benefit to residents in the local area. We are particularly interested in the idea of supporting an apprentice who lives in the local area. See the grant application form on the website: www.wimbledonparkcommunitytrust.org.uk

General Guidelines for applying for grants

Trustees have total discretion on awarding grants.

All applications must give proper detail of the intended use of the grant money and what the ultimate benefit/outcome will, or is expected to, be.

No grants will be given for general revenue purposes, only for specific or capital spending projects.

Can you help?

The Trust, since its formation, has been run by a team of Trustees who are all volunteers. Succession is now a key issue. It is the wish of the current Trustees to encourage new Trustees to join the board to help and eventually take over the day to day administration of the Hall and other related administrative responsibilities.

Currently, we are looking for someone to help with Hall bookings and related tasks. This is one of the most important daily activities of the Trust.

If you have any background in general management, or Charity work, and like working with people. Please get in touch with:

When Caring for a Parent Changes Everything

There is a moment for many families when the relationship between parent and child begins to shift.

Perhaps Mum is becoming a little less confident at home. Dad has stopped driving. There have been a couple of falls, or you have started noticing things that concern you. Suddenly, alongside being a daughter or son, you find yourself organising appointments, sorting medication, doing the shopping and worrying about what happens next.

I know this both personally and professionally. As the owner of Home Instead Wimbledon, supporting older people to continue living safely and independently in their own homes. I have seen first-hand the difference that the right support can make, not only to the person receiving it, but to their whole family.

But I have also been the daughter.

I cared for my own parents, so I understand the pressure and emotions that come with it. There was guilt, worry, frustration, exhaustion and that constant feeling that perhaps I should be doing more.

It was both my own experience as well as listening to many daughters over the last two decades that led me to write I'm Your Daughter, Not Your Carer.

The book is for anyone who has found themselves navigating that gradual and sometimes difficult change in their relationship with an ageing parent. It talks honestly about the things families often struggle to say out loud: sibling disagreements, guilt, resentment, difficult conversations, accepting outside help and, importantly, how to remain a daughter or son rather than becoming consumed by the role of carer.

That philosophy is also at the heart of what we do at Home Instead.

Good care should never be about taking over somebody's life. It should be about helping people retain their independence, choices and sense of self. And sometimes, bringing in professional support allows families to get something equally important back.

You can stop being the person who is constantly checking, organising and worrying.

You can simply be their daughter again.
